Sarasota Photographer Creates First-of-Its-Kind Immersive Art Experience at Herrig Center for the Arts

Photography exhibition features LED projection mapping and original musical score that bring still images to life

BRADENTON, FL (January 30, 2026) — What happens when fine art photography meets cutting-edge projection technology and an original musical composition? Visitors to the Herrig Center for the Arts in Bradenton can find out through February 27, 2026, at "Thru My Eyes," a groundbreaking solo exhibition by Sarasota-based nature photographer Nicholas James Bath.

The exhibition features 41 museum-quality metal prints spanning landscapes, wildlife, travel photography, and Bath's signature specialty: dreamy, painterly macro flower photography that reveals the hidden artistry in nature's smallest details.

But what sets this exhibition apart is its centerpiece: an 8-minute immersive video installation combining LED projection mapping with an original musical score—both created by Bath himself. The projections animate directly onto the photographs, making flowers bloom, landscapes shift, and still images come alive before visitors' eyes.

"I wanted to create more than a traditional gallery show. Photography captures a single moment, but with the projection mapping and music, I can take visitors on a journey—showing them the world the way I experience it when I'm behind the lens."

The metal prints, produced by ArtBeat Studios, offer exceptional color vibrancy and durability, with a luminous quality that enhances Bath's vivid nature imagery.

Bath, who has been photographing nature for over a decade, runs the commercial photography and video production company Thru My Eyes Productions in Sarasota. This exhibition marks his first solo fine art gallery show—and his first time combining his photography, video production, and music composition skills into a single unified experience.
